DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments, see pages 11 -16, filed 3/9/10, with respect to claims 1-11 and 13-15 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The 35 U.S.C. 103(a) rejection of claims 1-11 and 13-15 has been withdrawn.

In view of new 35 U.S.C. 101 guidelines a rejection for claims 13 and 14 has been added.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

The USPTO "Interim Guidelines for Examination of Patent Applications for Patent Subject Matter Eligibility" (Official Gazette notice of 22 November 2005), Annex IV, reads as follows:

Descriptive material can be characterized as either "functional descriptive material" or "nonfunctional descriptive material." In this context, "functional descriptive material" consists of data structures and computer programs which impart functionality when employed as a computer component. (The definition of "data structure" is "a physical or logical relationship among data elements, designed to support specific data manipulation functions." The New IEEE Standard Dictionary of Electrical and Electronics Terms 308 (5th ed. 1993).) "Non functional descriptive material" includes but is not limited to music, literary works and a compilation or mere arrangement of data.

When functional descriptive material is recorded on some computer-readable medium it becomes structurally and functionally interrelated to the medium and will be statutory in most cases since use of technology permits the function of the descriptive material to be realized. Compare In re Lowry, 32 F.3d 1579, 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d 1031, 1035 (Fed Cir. 1994) (claim to data structure stored on a computer readable medium that increases computer efficiency held statutory) and Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1360-61, 31 USPQ2d at 1759 (claim to computer having a specific data structure stored in memory held statutory product-by-process claim) with Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 17660 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory).

In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a computer program is a computer element which defines structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the rest of the computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory See Lowry, 32 F.3d at 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d at 1035.

Claims 13 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter as follows. Claims 13 and 14 define a computer program embodying functional descriptive material. However, the claim does not define a non-transitory computer-readable medium or memory and is thus non-statutory for that reason (i.e. "When functional descriptive material is recorded on some computer-readable medium it becomes structurally and functionally interrelated to the medium and will be statutory in most cases since use of technology permits the function of the descriptive material to be realized" -Guidelines Annex IV). That is the scope of the presently claimed computer program can range from paper on which the program is written, to a program simply contemplated and memorized by a person. The examiner suggests amending the claim to first claim a "non-transitory computer readable medium" to store the program on, or equivalent, in order to make the claim statutory. Any amendment to the claim should commensurate with its corresponding disclosure.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-11 and 15 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Regarding claims 1, 10 and 15, the prior art does not contain a valid combination of references that teaches determining using the processor, for each frame of said at least two frames frame, a record of any corresponding dependency frames, each said dependency frame being above a respective frame of said at least two frames frame in said display window; checking a start position of said each frame of said at least two frames against an end position of a created display region of a frame upon which said each frame of said at least two frames is dependent, and setting said start position to be said end position; create a display region upon a page in said printable representation at said start position according to said corresponding content height; place the content of said each frame of said at least two frames frame into said display region; and where said display region exceeds a page limit in said printable representation, terminate the display region at the page limit and create a further display region upon a following page of the printable representation so as to span the content of said each frame of said at least two frames frame across the display region and the further display region; and one of store the printable representation in the memory and transmit the printable representation to a printer for printing.

Most specifically the prior art does not teach printing multiple frames with dependencies for printing that are only vertically aligned (i.e. by height, not width) combined with spanning content of specific frames across page dividers.

Claims 2-9 and 11 are allowed because they depend upon allowed claims.

Claims 13 and 14 would be allowable for the same reasons as claims 1, 10 and 15 above if the 35 U.S.C. 101 rejection was overcome in the manner suggested.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
